Cantaloupe Moon weaves together the story of the night my five-year-old daughter spoke her first words with three pivotal truths found in Psalm 77. Ideal for Mother's Day or women's ministry kickoff luncheons, this interactive talk has 3 key points:

Remembering God in the darkness is active.

Questioning God in the darkness is acceptable.

Seeing God in the darkness is a choice.

Worship in the Desert: From Peril to Praise pulls together my misadventures on a mission trip to Mozambique with Jehoshaphat's encounters with three enemy armies in the Desert of Tekoa. Ideal for mission-emphasis events where traditional rice and beans could be served, this interactive talk focuses on Early Praise, Persistent Praise and Effectual Praise while challenging participants to choose between 2 questions:

How Can I Do This?

How Can God Use Me?

Preplant utilizes scrabble tiles in an interactive activity to teach that we can preplant the eight truths of Philippians 4:8 in our hearts. This presentation is best in a small-to-medium size setting where participants can gather around tables and sort through . . . you guessed it . . . scrabble tiles.

Christmas Crossing

Can God use a donkey to deliver the Good News? I weave two stories together in this short Christmas presentation: My Uncle Clarence's letter home that almost doesn't cross the Atlantic during World War II and a four legged Bible smuggler that navigates a border crossing in Western Asia. Darius the Donkey (pictured wiat) travels with me during the holidays.

Participants are encouraged to consider these questions:

Can anything hinder the delivery of the Good News? (Luke 4:18)

Can anything hinder the Messiah from coming to earth to dwell with us?
(2 Corinthians 6:16)

Can God use a donkey to deliver the Good News? (Romans 8:35-39)
